Such equity of treatment shall apply reciprosally to the respective vessels," &c. last provise, it is rather amusing to conceive the astonishment of a Turkish captain in our two harbor upon receiving the bill of port charges, who would either suppose that there was an infringement of the treaty or that we must be strangely unmerciful even to our own

It is evident that the treaty just effected is very liberal in tone and spirit. We only regret that our recent tariff is not more favorable to Turkish imports; but we trust that this treaty may effect some changes in this respect during the next session of Congress and after the suppression of the rebellion.

Every facility is offered to our citizens for the maintenance of the most liberal commerce between the two countries, which may be made sxceedingly profitable on account of the variety and intrinsic value of the products and manufactures to be interchanged. We derive our dyestuffs, drugs, fruits, wool, rags, &c., principally from Turkey, where there is an increasing demand for our manufactured goods of all sorts-cabinet furniture, stoves, Yankee notions. machines, presses, New England rum, colonial produce, &c., &c.

There is an immense market in Constantinople for cotton manufactures of all sorts, which has hitherto been monopolized by England; and there are now many Oriental merchants established at Manchester as partners of large houses in Constantinople. Cotton sheetings and prints are the staple wear in the East, and are sent from the capital all over the Turkish dominions, to Persia, Bukhara, &c. Now that American manufactures so successfully compete with those of England, why should our merchants not avail themselves of this profitable branch of trade? Besides, as Turkey is daily progressing in civilization, there will be an increasing demand for all our mechanical, agricultural and other useful inventions.

The indifference of our people to commerce with this part of the world cannot be attributed to distance; for the enterprise of our merchants has carried them to countries much more remote. It is only twenty-five or thirty years since we have had any intercourse with Turkey, unfortunately that country having previously made little or no advance in civilization. It is only within this period that quarantines have been established there, thus relieving commerce from that barrier, the plague. The only periodical reports which we have received from the East have been those of the missionaries, who are always inclined to enhance their own labors by exaggerated pictures of Heathendom; so we have naturally been led to consider the Orientals as outside barbarians, objects of philanthropy merely, from whom little could be gained. Since the Crimean war, not only wonderful advances have been made in civilization, but the spirit of freedom has instigated the different nationalities, both Mohammedan and Christian, to proclaim to the world who and what they are, their resources and capabilities, national and personal. In a word, the East is now ready to fraternize with the West. and to reciprocate, not only mutual courtesies, but the mutual benefits of extended intercourse and the most liberal commercial relations.

DESTRUCTION OF THE REBEL RAM ARKANS We have received information, through rebel sources, that Rear Admiral Farragut, true to his character and true to his energy, has accomplished the destruction of the rebel steam ram Arkansas. She left Vicksburg the other day to assist in an attack on Baton Ronge; but here ished. The rebels pretend that her machinery got out of order, and that this was the cause of her destruction. There is probably no doubt about this; but it is just as true that the derangement of her machinery was caused by the vigorous attack of our gallant gunboats. The ram Fingal, at Savannah, and the ram Richmond, at Richmond, are to go next. Then the greatest rebel ram of all-the rebel army at Richmondis to be annihilated by the Union ram McClel-Jan. This will end this wicked rebellion.

THE DRAFTING QUESTION .- Governor Morgan, "It appears, has determined not to draft men in this State until after the 15th inst., and then only in case of extreme necessity. Indeed, it seems evident now that the government will not be compelled to resort to the last draft, the recruiting being so brisk in the several States. At all events, it is said that drafting under the second call for 300,000 men will be postponed until after the 1st of September. Meantime the State of New York is to undergo a new military organization. Richard Busteed has been appointed Brigadier General by Pre-sident Lincoln, and is to assist Major General Morgan in reorganizing our military system.

THE NEW CALL FOR TROOPS.

The Runaway Excitement.

There is nothing new in relation to the would be "ske-daddiers," everything remaining quiet yesterday. Discussion was rife, however, upon the merits of the question, and different opinions were expressed as to the various modes in which the new order would be carried out. Some people asserted that none would be allowed to cross any of the ferries; but this suggestion was laughed at by the great majority of persons, and very properly too.

Superintendent Kennedy did not receive any further

Superintendent Kennedy did not receive any further rders yesterday relative to his new position as Provost Marchal; but the rules, as carried out on Saturday, will be pursued to day. Persons, therefore, taking tickets for places outside of the State are looked upon with the eye of suspicion, and the utmost watchfulness was observed by the police in order to counteract any such attempt. Testerday being the Sabbath no cases of "akedadding", are reported.

MILITIA REGIMENTS VOLUNTERRING.

[From the Albany Argus, August 9.]

Governor Morgan was in his office yesterday, having geturned from Washington the previous evening. He had a free and full consultation with the military authorites there in regard to the contemplated draft. The outline, but not the precise form of the order, was determined upon before he left. The order itself is expected to be reserved immediately. It will probably prescribe modes of proceeding irrespective of the State law, and will be drawn with a view to expedite and equalize the draft.

will be drawn with a view to expedite and equalize the draft.

Recruiting in most of the counties of this State is progressing rapidly, and there is good reason to believe that the first quota will be filled up in this way, if not by the 16th, within a few days afterwards, so as to supersede the necessity of dratting for the three years men. Some of the counties will raise more than their quota.

We think it probable that a pertion of the militia regiments (for nine months) may be raised voluntarily. The Tenth regiment in this city proposes to volunteer, and probably other uniformed, organized regiments will do the same, and with activity on the part of the administration, giving an earnest of vigor in the field and an effective use of the men and means piaced at its disposal, we really think enthusiasm enough would be elicited to secure the whole militia quota without drafting. The fact that General Halleck is at the need of the army inspires confidence, and if the President will cease "taking the seeponsibility" and trust all military movements to that efficer, we may expect to see the aspect of affairs speedily supports.

NEWS FROM WASHINGTON.

Our vessels arrived there at one in afternoon, and in the course of six hours delivered the three thousand and thirteen rebel prisoners to Commis-sioner Robert Ould. THE EMPLOYMENT OF CONTRABANDS—LETTER FROM GENERAL BIRNEY.

In reply to a letter from General Birney relative to the employment of contrabands, General Kearney writes from Harrison's Landing as follows:—"The Southerner, ruralists. I am opinion we should employ them un armed in like manner, for anything in which they can render service, and thus enable the whites to carry the musket. Therefore I fully advise their being employed as teamsters, pioneers, unarmed, and as cooks in regi

The opinion expressed in General Kearney's letter pre-rails among nine-tenths of the officers of the army, dent and the basis of the policy of the administration i question in a plain, practical, commonseess manner, an with a sense of the responsibility devolved upon him a President of the United States, which the advocates of extreme measures neither feel nor approxiate. He see infinitely more harm than good in the utterance of proclamation of universal emancipation which we canno suforce, and he relies more upon the one hundred thou sand white men from the border States, who are now ned against it by such a perversion of the purpos of the war, than upon all the negro regiments that might be raised both North and South. There are a number of important questions growing out of the issues presented and urged by the radicals which Mr. Lincoln has carefully considered, which the radical howlers have themselves not taken into account. He sees but on great issue—the reduction of the rebellion and the resto-ration of the authority of the government over all the United States. In following this issue he has determined upon the policy to be pursued, and to it he will firmly adupon the policy to be pursued, and to it he will hrmly ad-here, uninfluenced by the appeals of pre-slavery extremists and unintimidated by the menaces of abolition agitators. Of one thing, besides, the people may rest well assured—that is, that The war for the Union will henceforth to the end be promistaken lenity towards traitors and sympathisers with fribute to this result. The rebels will be made to realiz that it is war they have invoked, and war they will have in carnest until the whole Union shall be restored. CORRECTION.

In special orders of July 30, from the Adjutant General's office, Major J. H. Richardson was dismissed the service by the direction of the President. This was published in some of the newspapers, but others in copying the statement made it appear that Major General Richardson was dismissed. There is an efficer, Israel B. Richardson, who won the commission of major general by gallanty in the field, and it is but just he should be thus relieved from the unfavorable position in which as error of the press has placed him.

Theatrical and Musical

Judging by the number of burlesques produced at our secrepolitan theatres lately, the taste for that species of entertainment is rapidly growing with our public. In the course of a few weeks no less than a dozen new buriettasmostly importations from England—have been produced here, and with a degree of success that does not usually ittend that class of performances. The secret of this is indoubtedly to be found in the fact that the pieces themselves possess some solid claims to popularity, not being of the trashy and stupid character to which the New York andiences have been accustomed. The manner in which they have been put upon the stage, too, has had a great deal to do with their success, more than usual attention having been devoted to the details and miss an scene, which Florence, if he had no other claims upon the public, is entitled to support for the good example he has set ma angers in this particular. Acting upon the wholesome rule, that if a piece is worth producing at all it is worth while to produce it well, he has brought out three or four excellent burlesques with a completeness which has gained him the good opinion of all lovers of the drama, though it may not on all occasions have been rewarded with the pocuniary success it deserved. We wish that we could include in this category the new English extravaganza of "Eily O'Connor," by Mr. H. F. Byron author of "Fra Diavolo" and numerous other capital pieces of the same kind. It is weak in construction and tive way it is put upon the stage, would be an utter fail ure. As it was, Mr. Florence hardly rescued it from condemnation the first night by his comical impersonation of the heroine. We see that the piece is announced for per-formance again this evening. It is therefore to be presumed that it has improved on repetition, or that it suit the taste of some portion of our public.

The Winter Garden closed last week after a brief, and we regret to add, unsuccessful season, by the company formed under Mr. Floming. We must say that we were not unprepared for this result. The character of the pieces presented, and the composition of the company, were not exactly suited to "the heated term." It requires a very nice judgment in selection, and the creme mouseeux of artistic talent in impersonation, to indus perature like the present. We are sorry for Mr. Fleming for he is painstaking and earnest in his devotion to th are making efforts to get up a complimentary benefit for him. It was intended that it should have taken place this evening; but circumstances have necess

The engagement of the veteran panto mimist, Gabriel Ravel, on the scene of his old triumphs has proved the most successful stroke of the season During the past week the house has been crowded ever night, and will no doubt continue to be so on every occasion of the performance of this great favorite. Young America, the wonderful boy gymnast, trained by Gabriel has created a regular furor by his daring feats on the fly ing trapeze, as well as by his singular beauty of person.
Young as he is, he is fairly a match for Hanlon, and it is said that the performances of the famous Lootard himself do not excel those of this promising gymnast.

Owing to a tribuph of mechanical science, in connec tion with singing, the operatic stage is about to receive an accession which will add to the laurels already gained by American vocations. One of the post and mast executed of our concert singers.—Miss Carlotta Patts—has been hitherto confined to that limited professional sphere by the results of an accident which deprived her of the free use of one of her limbs early in life. In all other respects use of one of her limbs early in life. In all other respects no singer could be better qualified for an operatic career. Handsome in features, with a well formed figure, graceful and winning manners, a voice of extended compass, and a highly cultivated method, nothing would have prevented her success in it but her unfortunate lameness. Could this have been surmounted, she would long since have preceded her brilliant sister Adelina on the stage. In vain she appealed to the recourses of surgical and mechanical art for the means of removing an obstacle that defeated her foodly oberished aspirations. It seemed as if she was destined to play all her life a second rate role, whilst be new others with half her talent winning If she was destined to play all her life a second rate role, whilst she saw ethers with half her talent winning trumphs in the first rank of the prefession. At last the hopes so frequently disappointed have been unexpectedly reslited. A chance consultation with Dr. Ceccarini, a surgeon in high esteem among the foreign population of our city, led to the expression of a belief upon his part that he could invent an apparatus that would enable her to walk perfectly. He set himse to work, made drawings, which were placed in the hand gical mechanician, and the most complete wned the effort. By the aid of this apparatus success has crowned the effort. By the aid of this apparatus Miss Patti, who has hitherto limped painfully, can now move with the same apparent case and precision as if she act herself to prepare for the career to which her hopes had been so long directed. For the last month she has been studying hard under the direction of that able instructor, Signor Scola, and will make her debut in opera early in the fall. We are assured, by those who have seen her rehearse with this apparatus, that the half which was so observable in her gait has entirely disappeared. The result of this discovery is not only of great interest in an artistic point of view, but it willibring comfort and gratification to many who, like Miss Patti, have been the victims of accident or of the fresks of

The negotiations between Signer Vianesi, the agent Griss and Mario, and Mr. Grau, were broken off, we not learn, not because those distinguished artists were afraid to come here at the present time, but because of the enermous difference which the rate of exchange would make in the terms of the contract. The deposit money deman-($10,000) was ready, and all other conditions agreed upon ($10,000) was ready, and all other conditions agreed upon, when this difficulty arose. Mr. Vlanesi did not feel him self authorized to conclude the arrangement on the legal tender basis, which one way or another, would make a difference of about thirty per cent, and he accordingly redifference of about thirty per cent, and he accordingly re-turned last week to Europe, with the understanding that if his principals waived the point the original agreement would hold good. Frequent propositions have of late years been made to Madame Grisi and Signor Mario to revisit this country. They have steadily declined to do so, until a difficulty between Mario and M. Caizado, the Paris director, rendered it politic for the former to ab-sent himself from the Italiens this coming winter. Opera without Marie has, in Paris, come to be consent himself from the Italiens this coming winter. Opera without Marie has, in Paris, come to be considered almost an impossibility, and so, to punish the refractory director, the distinguished tenor and his Casta Dies have turned their thoughts in this direction. Four years ago he was attacked with tubercular consumption. Such was the atrought of his constitution, and so vigorously did he struggle against the advances of the disease, that it was not till within a few months that his friends abandoned hope of his recovery. By the advice of his physician he spent three winters in the West Indies, and beguited his islaure by writing his "Ordeal of Free Labor in the British West Indies," by far the best book which has appeared on the subject of emancipation—a work so dispassionately and honestly written that both pro and anti-slavery partisans have claimed the author as an ally, and both have drawn largely from its pages for arguments in the slavery controversy. Of Mr. Sewell's own opinions and of his hearty devotion to the cause of his adopted country at the present orisis, no one who knew him ever doubted for an instant. His death has deprived the New York press of an able, honest and most muturious member; it has robbed a very large circle of journalists of an affectionate, faithful and wholesouled friend.

My Daar Colored Nugert—The news has this moment reached me that our gentle, gallant, noble young friend and comrade, Temple Emmet, of the Eighty-eighth, died late last night at his father's residence in Astoria. I am grieved to the heart to bear this; for I cetteened, trusted, and loved him as a favorite brother. His spotless integrity; the sweetness of his manners; the innate refinement and delicacy he betrayed in every word and look; the nigh, proud character of his mind; his perfect self-pessession and utter fearlesness in battle, made us all admire and love him. Heautifully and bravely has he, in his short career as a soldler, upheld the historic honor of his family, discharging, at the peril of his life, his grateful duty to the country in which no rame is more revered than that of Thomas Addis Emmet. Ever since our expedition to the Rappahannock, in March last, he was a member of my staff, and as such I have especial reasons to speak of him with the warmest and brightest remembrance. In him I lose a companion, affectionate and devoted, whose society brightened whilst it softened many of those ruder associations which all of us have to submit to in active millitary life. Returning to the camp of the brigate, I shall miss him more, keenly far porhaps, than I do even now, the morning of his death. So far as it will be agreeable to the wishes of his sortly afflicted father, I beg that you will see that the officers of the Irish Brigade at present in New York will pay the remains of their noble young comrade the respect due to the momory of his character and military services.
